Goddard seminary's friends continue to show their loyalty by their bequests.

Granite quarries are being opened now in the northern part of the state. Vermont is itself a vast quarry containing most valuable deposits.

The recent robberies in this city and Montpelier are too much alike to be anything but monotonous. The anxiety is to see if they will stop now.

A few over one million people have visited the St. Louis fair since it opened, which would be a good paying attendance if nearly one-half of them had not been deadheads.

The indications point to the fact that there will be some fast base ball in Vermont and Plattsburg this summer. The five teams in the Northern league are taking on some fine players.

And now, as a sort of specialty between the acts comes the election of four school commissioners in this city. The political drama in Rutland comes pretty nearly being a continuous performance.—Rutland News.

There is undoubtedly more politics to the square inch in Rutland than there is in any place in the state, and Rutland is welcome to all it stirs up.

Striking a sarcastic vein, mixed with a touch of facetiousness, the Island Pond Herald says:

What a clamor there is among the common people for DeBoer! Farmers are neglecting their fields, merchants their counters and mechanics their benches in order to get together and "whoop" "er" up for their companion at arms, the honorable president of one of the largest corporations in the state. They all know him personally. He has fished and bunked with them, and swapped stories. And the press is simply echoing the cry of the common people, that is all.

There certainly has been but small clamor for Bell or Stanton. All the enthusiasm for both of them could be gathered up and be put into a pint measure which would even then rattle with emptiness.

SPAUDLING HIGH SCHOOL APPROVED BY NEW ENGLAND BOARD.

Barre people take a large measure of pride in their public school system and support it well—so well, in fact, that one occasionally hears a word of complaint that the schools are given too much attention in comparison with other departments. But those few objectors would not for a minute think of lowering the standard by curtailing in the least the support of the department. As a matter of fact most people really believe that none too much is spent on the schools in order to keep the standard where it belongs. The public schools of this city do cost a considerable amount of money, but the tax payers may rest assured that not one cent more than is actually needed is being put into the work. And if the system costs, the citizens are getting something for their money. There is a tangible result, not alone in buildings of brick and stone but in the betterment of the city. Every cent put into the public school system will come back fourfold in the long run. That is the principle under which we are going at the present time, and the wisdom of it is already becoming apparent in connection with the high school department.

We refer to the notification recently received by Superintendent Mathewson from the New England College Certificate Board, stating that the Spaulding high school has been placed on the list of "approved" schools for a period of three years. This approval by the New England Board means that graduates from the local school will be admitted to any of the colleges which are members of this board, without previous examination, provided they present the proper certificates of graduation. The colleges which are included in the membership of the board are among the best institutions of New England, which have agreed to all the rules governing the admission of students to college. To be approved by the board means that the school must be subjected to a rigid examination as regards its courses and the methods of instruction, and in order to measure up to the standard required the school must be of a high grade. And the longest period during which the approval remains is three years. Unless otherwise stipulated such schools as wish to be on the list must be examined each year. In the case of Spaulding high school the "approval" has been granted for a period of three years, the longest allowed by the New England Board.

There are but few high schools, academies and seminaries in Vermont, whose courses of instruction have been approved and whose graduates are permitted to enter these colleges without examination. Thus it will be seen that our school measures up to a very high standard, particularly when it is borne in mind that the period of the approval runs for three years, while others in the state are for a less period. When this fact is considered the citizens of this city will realize that they are getting results from money well expended, while their children are having the advantages of the excellent instruction which this approval signifies.

This action by the New England board is mentioned to show that the pride which Barre people take in their schools is not built on assumption but on fact. We have many evidences to prove to ourselves the excellence of the standard; this recent outside and critical judgment makes the contention all the stronger.

ABOUT THE STATE.

Items of Interest Gleaned From Our Exchanges.

A county fair will be held in Rutland next fall although the Rutland County Agricultural society is in a bad way financially. The decision was reached at a special meeting of the society held in Rutland Saturday.

The veteran horseman, Charles Taylor, of White River Junction, who reached his 98th year last December, is in better health this spring than he has been for some time previous. Mr. Taylor is well known as the genial, honest and faithful driver of Factory Boy and Robert B.

Henry Ryther of Montpelier, who is an old machinist and inventor, for seven months has been perfecting a patent butter tub cover maker. The machine will make twelve complete covers a minute, cutting them out, hooping and nailing them. He has made the machine for Nelson, Hall & Co., butter tub makers at Montpelier Center, who employ about 170 men in their plant.

"Shakespeare" is the classic name given the faithful 12-year-old horse driven by Porter C. Spencer on his daily rounds of the village in the interests of the supply department of the Brattleboro Retreat.

"Shakespeare" has some peculiar habits, natural and acquired, which distinguish him from the ordinary horse. He chews tobacco and likes it. Every morning when "Shakespeare" is reined up before his indulgent driver he makes known his longing for a morsel of Virginia weed by a significant little whinney, which he knows, by long experience, is the proper signal for a sizeable portion of a good cigar, a small wad of "fine cut" or a bit of "navy plug," all of which are taken with apparent relish and satisfaction, while after this "Shakespeare" is ready for his regular joggling trip to town where he has too much at stake to think of dodging a trolley car or prance to the strains of a brass band.

All the business firms know "Shakespeare" and would be glad to enter to his strange taste—a privilege strictly reserved to the kindly steward himself. Some day when "Shakespeare" fails to appear on his grand rounds, business will suspend long enough for the "shopkeepers," as Kipling used to like to call them, to inquire the name of the old horse, and if his kind-hearted master really attributed his horse's habits to his habits.
